Ross Valley Sanitary District Releases Updated Version of Its Sewer Rate Study

June 23, 2011, Ross Valley. The Ross Valley Sanitary District, the 111-year-old sewer agency serving the Ross Valley, has released an updated version of its rate study that reflects the May 3 decision by its board of directors to revise an initial rate proposal that included significant funding for increased capital improvement.

The study, which contains more of the information provided to ratepayers about the District's current one-year proposal to increase rates in order to maintain current levels of service and capital improvement, also provides rate scenarios based on increased capital improvements in future years.

The revised and updated study is one of several tools the board of directors will use to address the community's aging infrastructure as it looks beyond the current one-year rate proposal that will be discussed at the Public Hearing on June 28, at Kent Middle School at 6:00 p.m.

The rate study has been posted on the Ross Valley Sanitary District website, www.rvsd.org, along with other information about the current rate proposal.
